
The VW/Holdsworth Vision

of the Future ...

Welcome Home

The thing that will surprise you most about this super luxury, fully equipped residence is the fact that it has a wheel at each corner.

Such luxury as the latest enamel kitchen and sink units, two cubic foot fridge, single or double beds and separate toilet compartment normally comes only with a house tied firmly to its foundations.

But because this is the Volkswagen Vision motor caravan it has something no house could offer—a 'go as you please' and 'go where you please' versatility that leaves the ordinary house buyer holding his head in dismay.

Volkswagen's rear engine gives a sure-footed fraction that ensures genuine 'off the road' capability when camping in the wild and back on the road the all-independent suspension, choice of four or five speed gearboxes (plus automatic) gives speed and economy between sites. Two power options in petrol and a diesel or turbo diesel leaves the competition sadly lacking when it comes to choice.

There's even a four wheel drive option if you're contemplating crossing the Sahara on your next holiday adventure.

As you can see, the Vision has genuine 'L' shaped lounge to pamper you at every stop. A few simple operations and the lounge turns into either a giant double bed or two singles. A simple foldaway divider divides off part of the vehicle when a toilet compartment is required and folds away when it is not.

Soft furnishings are luxurious dralon curtains all round. Carpets are an expensive wool twist with a five year guarantee. And for the businessman, part of the seating lifts out to carry goods—and help him re-claim his VAT.

The Volkswagen Vision. It could change your views on buying your next motor caravan—even your next house.
